For Senate 2010

Apparently,
Dick Blumenthal
will say anything ...

In an interview about his U.S. Senate race, Dick Blumenthal said, “I’ve never taken PAC money and I have rejected all special interest money ...”

– Interview with Dick Blumenthal on MSNBC, January 7, 2010

Turns out, he did take PAC money.

Dick Blumenthal took almost $17,000 in special interest PAC money while running for the General Assembly.

And since January, he has taken $480,000 more PAC money.

Now Blumenthal is running for the U.S. Senate and has taken more than $480,000 from PACs, including from the insurance industry and unions.

He even traveled to Vancouver, Canada to attend a special interest fundraiser.

Blumenthal traveled 3,000 miles to Vancouver, British Columbia to attend a fundraiser with Harry Reid hosted by trial lawyers.

Then when asked why he would go to Canada for special interest money, he oddly tried to deny it was a fundraiser.

– WTNH, July 22, 2010

“Blumenthal seems to have a problem giving a direct answer to that question.”

– WTNH, August 3, 2010

It seems Dick Blumenthal is just not honest about a lot of things.

“Blumenthal has always taken pride in the fact that he has not accepted special interest money – until he launched his U.S. Senate campaign.”

Dick Blumenthal. He’s not who we thought he was.
